1. A general offensive by the Chinese Communists is scheduled to take place in Indochina in the near future.
2. Six months ago the Chinese Communists in Kwangsi established two training classes at Henghsien (109-20, 22-38) and Yungshun (108-54, 22-48). These men have completed training and were equipped with arms on 15 September 1951. They began infiltrating Indochina on 17 September. A second group of about 5,000 men is scheduled to begin training at these stations.
3. The Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRV) training class, at the former local militia training school at Hsit'ang (西 江), moved on 10 September to the former military academy at Nanning. YU Shao-shan (于 少 山) is now in charge of the training class which originally had 500 students now increased to 1,000.
4. On 12 September 18 prisoners of war, captured by the DRV in fighting in Indochina, were sent to Lungchou (106-56, 22-22) via P'ingshiang (106-44, 22-06) on the China-Indochina border. Five of the prisoners are German. The rest are North African natives. In addition to the above, French prisoners of war were sent to Lungchou from northern Indochina in the winter of 1950.
5. On 11 September 80 military trucks were parked in the southern part of Kao Ping (高 平). These trucks are a part of Chinese Communist aid to the DRV. These vehicles are being driven by unemployed drivers from Kwangsi, requested by the Kwangsi Military District Headquarters.
6. In the vicinity of Kao Ping are 5,000 newly recruited DRV troops being trained by 60 low-ranking staff officers. The majority of political instructors are graduates of Nanfang University, Canton. Several Soviets have been observed on the streets of Kao Ping.
